Techniques for Maintaining Persistent Preferences

Abstract of the Disclosure

Methods, systems, and data structure provide persistent preferences for services over a network. An entity's preference is recorded in an external location from the entity. The preference is automatically installed in 5 a local environment of the entity when the entity attempts to access a service. The service detects the preference in the local environment and automatically processes the preference.